To Whom It May Concern:

Please keep federal regulations requiring the labeling of irradiated food intact. Irradiation, like many things, is being touted as safe. It may very well be safe, but I still do not wish to consume products which have been irradiated. Years from now, we may find that we were wrong about the safety of this practice, as we have found about so many other things we initially thought were "safe."

People have a right to know what they're eating. The labeling needs to be prominently displayed, not hidden within a list of 30 or more ingredients.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,
Deanna Biddulph
